

Update June 2001

This list identifies products containing phenylpropanolamine (PPA) available on the Canadian market at the time of the first Advisory on November 6, 2000. Although products containing PPA are being withdrawn, there remains the possibility that some products may be left on shelves in pharmacies or other retail outlets. This list also assists consumers in identifying products containing PPA that may be stored in their homes and should be disposed of safely.

Some products are being reformulated by either the removal of PPA or replacement of it with a safe and effective alternative nasal decongestant. In the case of reformulated products in which the manufacturer wishes to retain the same product name, they are being asked to indicate the change in formulation on the label with words like "New formulation".

To identify products containing PPA, Health Canada advises consumers to check for "phenylpropanolamine" on the list of ingredients on the product label or consult with a pharmacist or their physician.

The completeness and accuracy of this lists of products containing phenylpropanolamine depends on the manufacturer`s notifying Health Canada of any changes. Health Canada strongly advises consumers to check the ingredient list on the product label for the presence of "phenylpropanolamine".
